SELECTIONS FROM THE JAMES F. DUFFY, JR. GIFT

July 15 – November 4, 2001

Local artist Gordon Newton has been creating unconventional works of art for more than three decades, dating back to the 1960s when he and other urban artists formed Detroit's Cass Corridor movement. Thanks to a generous gift from Newton's friend, art collector James F. Duffy Jr., the Detroit Institute of Arts presents an exhibition featuring 150 of Newton's works on paper: art inspired by his visions of nature, architecture and the human psyche.

INSIDE THE FAIRS

Brave New World

A bitter divorce between merchants and the original art fair on South U has spawned a fourth fair—and an uncertain future.

To casual visitors, the Ann Arbor Art Fairs are one rushing river of treasures and trinkets. So most fairgoers won't even notice that this year the thirty-year-old trio of official fairs has turned into a quartet. Outwardly everything looks much the same, and only the most knowledgeable ear might detect the sound of something precious coming apart on South University Avenue.

There, an acrimonious feud between organizers of the oldest and most prestigious of the fairs and the merchants who have long supported it has resulted in an official divorce. The settlement keeps the two parties in the same digs for this year and next, with separate adjacent fairs, but requires the venerable Street Art Fair to find a new space by 2003.

This squabble over turf and proceeds is a striking indication of how the once informal fairs have become big business. In the lucrative, competitive locale of one of the nation's biggest art fair events, the spirit of generous, carefree expansion that characterized the early fairs has given way to a more contentious kind of growth. Even so, the bitterness that has marked the battle between the Street Art Fair and the South University merchants is striking, and their separation agreement raises many tough questions about the future. The cornerstone of the Art Fairs is soon to be homeless, while a new merchant-run fair has gained official status. Yet even this unlikely outcome is a triumph—because for a while it looked as if the Street Art Fair might not even operate this year.

In the beginning the Ann Arbor Art Fairs grew haphazardly. The original Street Art Fair was a collaborative venture by a handful of artists, merchants, and community leaders in 1960. The founders didn't expect it to last more than a few years. But it not only endured, it gave rise to two additional fairs, the State Street Area Art Fair in 1967 and the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans' Summer Art Fair in 1970.

CARINE LUTZ

In their early years the fairs were so informal that artists simply showed up with work to sell. Those days are long gone. The Street Art Fair has evolved into a year-round, nonprofit arts organization that buys art for public buildings, sponsors local exhibitions, awards scholarships, and participates in the city's Art in Public Places initiative. SAF has an annual budget of $160,000 and is the only Ann Arbor fair with a full-time director, Shary Brown.

For decades the fair coexisted peacefully with the merchants in the South University shopping district. Merchants served on the SAF board and provided artists with storage space, bathrooms, a lounge, a swimming pool, and even a masseuse. "For forty years we've been taking care of the artists," says Maggie Ladd, executive director of the South University Area Association (SUAA).

Things began to unravel in 1997, when a small group of shop owners led by Kent Whiteman and Roshanak Ameli, then owners of Cava Java, took control of the association (then called the South University Merchants Association), changed its name, and launched a drive to increase the group's revenues from the Street Art Fair.

Shary Brown (left) wanted to keep the Street Art Fair small and selective. Maggie Ladd wanted more money for South U merchants. After a bitter struggle, each will get her wish, and Ann Arbor will get a fourth fair.

On average, the merchant group was netting around $24,000 a year from the event. Under a changing series of arrangements, SUAA's revenues increased to about $30,000 by 2000. In contrast, the State Street Area Association, which operates its own fair, gets about $125,000 a year from fair proceeds, and the Main Street merchants' group averages $54,000 annually from the Guild's fair.

Revenues are tied to a fair's size. At about 70,000 square feet, the Street Art Fair is much smaller than the other fairs. Nonetheless, the South U merchants have felt they're getting a raw deal. "We are the ones who built this fair," says SUAA president Dennis Tice. "The lifeline of the area is the merchants' group."

A student neighborhood, the South University area lacks the healthy demographic and retail mix that helps both the State Street and Main Street business districts thrive. And the recent closing of the city's South Forest parking garage for sixteen months further depressed sales on South U. The area's economic woes heightened the tensions surrounding the Street Art Fair. "This is a struggle for the revitalization of an entire area," says Ladd, who charges that SAF has not been "invested in the community."

Brown says that her fair has been deeply committed to the area but that as a small nonprofit organization, it is incapable of bailing out the district. The SAF directors have avoided making the fair bigger for fear of diluting its quality. Nor have they wanted to raise booth fees and thereby exclude some promising newer artists. Earlier this year, when tensions were high, Brown decried the notion that "the Street Art Fair should change its mission from being a cultural event to being a fund-raiser for the South University merchants' association."

The squabble over financial equity degenerated into a clash of personalities and wills, with slurs and supposed slurs, punctuated by periodic attempts by city officials to find a solution. All came to naught.

"You can't force two people together who have different visions of the future," says the State Street Area Association's executive director, Tom Heywood. "You take the smallest fair, with the highest overhead, and tell them to produce [more money] when they want to be smaller, they want to be one of the best fairs in the country. But their neighbors feel they're not getting their fair share."

Last year the merchants took the bull by the horns. SUAA got a permit from the city to operate its own food court on Church Street, intending to make money from food and drink sales. But South U merchants decided that the food court would undercut revenues from their own restaurants, so SUAA instead assembled its own unauthorized art fair, the Art Fair Village, on Church. SUAA selected forty-one artists from local gallery and artist recommendations and from artists who had participated in previous State Street fairs. Art Fair Village netted SUAA $18,000, according to Ladd.

Art Fair Village set the two groups on a collision course that soon became a high-stakes game of "chicken," with each issuing demands the other group couldn't stomach. Despite attempts at negotiations and compromises over the winter and spring, the two groups continued to present city officials with competing plans. Brown and the SAF directors did not want SUAA to operate another Art Fair Village, which they viewed as competitive. SUAA wanted a far greater share of revenues or ultimate control over what would be staged in the area.

At the beginning of June the Street Art Fair still had no city permit to operate, and it was unclear whether any fair would be staged on South U this year. Nearly everyone compares the situation to an irreparably broken marriage. "The two groups were never going to be able to resolve their differences," says city council member Joan Lowenstein, who spent months trying to settle the conflict. "They didn't trust each other."

On June 3, with the clock ticking down, Fifth Ward councilman Chris Easthope, who'd been working with both organizations, convened an emergency meeting at the Michigan Union. The tense, four-hour negotiations yielded an accord, ratified the following day by city council, under which SUAA and SAF will operate separate adjacent fairs this year and next. In 2003 the Street Art Fair will move, and the merchants' fair will take over the South University district.

Although widely viewed as a victory for the merchants, the agreement left both directors feeling optimistic for the first time in years. "We get to look ahead, and that's an enormous change," Brown says. Ladd terms the outcome "a wonderful opportunity" and vows that her association will be one of the Street Art Fair's "best neighbors."

This year's Art Fair Village is juried. Ladd has sought advice on judging and other artist issues from her colleagues at the State Street Area Art Fair. In 2003, when the merchants' fair takes over the entire area, it will, Ladd says, have a "new look."

Already, the search is on for a new home for the Street Art Fair. Most mentioned as possibilities are North University Avenue, in front of Hill Auditorium, and the South University-Tappan area, near the Law Quad. But Brown isn't making any commitments yet, saying she has "several others in my mind that no one's thought about."

City officials say they're confident the town can handle a fourth art fair. But will more merchant groups want in on the action? "It's way too early to have thought that out," mayor John Hieftje says. There is no sign of any rifts between the other two established fairs and their hosts. But there are restive merchants downtown. Lesley Gresham, president of the Kerrystown Market and Shops, says, "We'd love to have an art fair here." But when Kerrystown board members talked to city officials last year, they got a cold shoulder. "They were very adamant that it would impose stresses on the infrastructure," Gresham says. "It doesn't feel nice to be rejected when other associations are able to get art fairs in their area."

How artists and fairgoers will respond to the change is uncertain. Amy Detwiler, editor-in-chief of Sunshine Artist, a national trade publication for art and craft exhibitors, says it's dangerous for well-established shows to relocate. "Anytime a show moves, it becomes like a first-time show," she says. But the Street Art Fair is "so high quality, so excellent, so cutting edge," Detwiler says, that its loyal patrons might follow it. Among artists, however, Detwiler senses "some uneasiness. I know people who routinely make thirty thousand dollars at the Ann Arbor fairs. It's very scary for them."

Brown plans to spend this year choosing a new site and next year mounting an ambitious marketing campaign to prepare artists and the public for the change. She says she's excited about the chance to "reinvent ourselves."

Year in, year out, the success of all the Ann Arbor Art Fairs rides on dozens of intricate agreements about everything from T-shirt sales to bus-stop locations to the direction artists' booths face. This delicate underpinning of the fairs isn't noticeable to most attendees, who see the whole affair as a seamless event. And that's what organizers hope they'll continue to see. "So there are four fairs?" says Heywood. "So what? To the public there's only one fair. And it's all over the place, and boy, is it fun!"

Digital Art Arrives

The Ann Arbor Art Fairs' first digital artist is so excited about his new medium that he says he "might never do another watercolor again."

"I'm doing the best work in my life," says Stephen Sebastian of High Point, North Carolina. Over the past twenty-five years, Sebastian has built a solid reputation on the quality of his richly colored and detailed watercolors. "I see now that everything has led up to this."

Sebastian starts creating his digital images almost exactly as he would his watercolors, by sketching his subject in the field. But instead of transferring the sketch onto watercolor paper, he now scans it into a computer.

"I approach this as a painterly medium," he explains. "With the new software I can select my brush size and shape, stroke, and apply my color as I would with any painting. But this is so powerful it's a little bit scary. My stylus can sense more than a thousand levels of pressure and every angle. I can get closer to my mental image than anything I've ever done before—the beauty and color is greater than anything I've ever worked with."

He still features the traditional subjects he has drawn and painted throughout his career—porches, windows, and landscapes. But a digital work by Sebastian doesn't look like a watercolor. "You might mistake it for a nineteenth-century French impressionist painting," he says. "I'm striving to get the essence of my subject and not get caught up in the detail."

Sebastian's "digital canvases" take at least as long to produce as his watercolors did. The price is similar, too, with limited-edition prints ranging from about $75 to $400, depending on size.

You'll find Sebastian in the State Street Area Art Fair, which this year solicited digital art for the first time. The Street Art Fair has been taking applications from digital artists for six years, longer than the other fairs have, but no one, including Sebastian, has made it past the jurors. Shary Brown, the Street Art Fair's executive director, says it's such a new medium that jurors don't feel confident evaluating it. They also have to ask, says Brown, whether the art was created by a computer or by the artist.

Sebastian and others say that for serious digital artists the answer is straightforward: "The computer isn't generating the art—I am."

The State Street Area Art Fair has adopted criteria developed by the newly formed National Association of Independent Artists, mandating that digital artists do at least 50 percent of their composition on the computer and produce only a limited edition of signed and numbered prints (usually just 250) on archival-quality paper.

Many fairs are still reluctant to embrace digital art, says Kenneth Huff, an artist who has been working in the medium for about ten years. Major museums and galleries began exhibiting digital art only in the last few years. And there still aren't many digital artists. "I've been showing my work at fairs for about four years, and often I'm the first and only one participating," says Huff. But he sees a big change on the horizon: "Major art schools are beginning to teach this as a fine art and think of computers in the same way as a camera or paintbrush."

Both Huff and Sebastian say the public readily accepts digital art. After two shows, Sebastian says, "the response has blown me away. Without exception, everyone I talked to embraced it, and I never lost a sale. In fact, I sold to people who were standing around and overheard me talking about my work."

But some fair artists still regard the medium with suspicion or resentment. Painters may feel especially vulnerable, because they work in a high-stakes medium. Some see digital art as akin to selling reproductions. Once a painting is sold, it's gone, but a digital artist can potentially sell an unlimited number of digital canvases from a single image.

Sebastian says many artists at first mistakenly see the computer as an easy way to make more money. "They'd come up to my booth and ask me what software I used and how I did it, and I told them everything. But when they tried it and found out how hard it is, they'd just give up."

There probably will always be artists who continue to enjoy using techniques developed 500 years ago. But Sebastian thinks the art world will soon embrace his new medium. "This is an awesome tool," says Sebastian. "There's no doubt in my mind that Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo would have loved to work with this. And this is only the beginning."

Ready for Anything

If you can't squeeze down Liberty Street, how can a fire truck?

At the height of the Ann Arbor Art Fairs, with hundreds of thousands of visitors crammed into twenty-six blocks, you don't have to be paranoid to wonder—what if flames engulf Borders? What if a fairgoer has a heart attack on South U? If I can't squeeze down Liberty Street, how can a fire truck?

Knock on wood: in forty-one years the worst calamities to strike the fairs have been some torrential rainstorms—but just in case, the fairs have put together a coordinated emergency response plan this year to replace their previous fragmentary efforts. Written by John Yanchula, director of the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans' Summer Art Fair, the plan includes instructions on how to respond to everything from a bomb threat to a broken leg. "Even though we're all individual groups," Yanchula explains, "we can hopefully work together on emergencies."

Shary Brown, director of the Street Art Fair, welcomes the new system. "If things just are not going right and no one knows why, people get frustrated and make a difficult situation worse," she says. "If we can share information, people can be un-

John Yanchula, the Guild's art fair director, installs a new emergency communications antenna on top of the Guild's downtown office building. All four fairs can now warn each other about lost children, shoplifters, and impending storms.

Roxy and Tyler Wells, clothing designers and weavers from Connecticut, had a booth at Maynard and William when the 1999 biggie struck. They had enough advance notice to pack up their work and take shelter. Then they watched as wind destroyed their booth, even though it had weights on every leg, and one leg was chained to a grate in the street. The forty-mile-an-hour winds lifted the cast-iron grate, Roxy recalls.

"We looked at it and I said, 'Well, I guess we leave,'" adds Tyler, who two years later is able to chuckle about going home a day early from one of the nation's most lucrative art fairs. Last year, the couple asked for a booth under the Maynard parking structure overpass. The wind is reportedly less severe there.

"We loved our location at William and Maynard, but after being blown away twice [there], we thought we'd give up the greatest location in the world to be a little more secure," Tyler says.

Rolling with the punches seems to be a job requirement for artists at outdoor fairs. For example, says State Street Area Art Fair director Kathy Krick, artists accept that if a huge blaze breaks out, firefighters won't blink at running trucks right over booths. She's heard that it's happened at other fairs. No wonder that most artists, like other small businesses, carry insurance.

Rayburn confirms that in the event of a working fire, "all bets are off. We'll try to be careful, but saving the building and anybody inside is going to take precedence over someone's watercolor—sorry."

derstanding and ease the impact of a difficult situation."

Interim fire chief Scott Rayburn says the coordinated effort is long overdue. "If something happens at Division and Liberty, we're going to clear the street both ways, and that affects two different fairs," Rayburn says. "Communications among the fairs will make our job easier."

To make those communications easier, the Summer Art Fair, Street Art Fair, State Street Area Art Fair, and Art Fair Village all have new multichannel radios that will speed contact among the fairs, firefighters, and police. Each group will have its own channel for internal talk, and a common channel will connect everyone.

With luck, the new system will never have to deal with a catastrophe. Even so, fair officials say, the radios will come in handy for dealing with more common problems—reporting a lost child, alerting artists to shoplifters, or warning about an impending storm.

Sharing information should help artists be better prepared for those slashing thunderstorms that love to visit at fair time.

The non-profit Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, the original juried fair, located in the South University area, has been ranked the number one fine art fair in the nation by both the National Association of Independent Artists and by Sunshine Artists Magazine. Each year the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair selects 200 artists from an average of 1800 applicants, with more than 80 new artists invited for the 2001 fair. Artists are selected through the nation's most rigorous jury process.

In addition to the fabulous visual art display, fairgoers will enjoy:

- Street performers like the world famous boogie woogie piano player Mr. B., comedic juggler Josh Casey, and elegant classical and jazz acappella by the Vocal Arts Ensemble plus dozens more in four locations;
- Artist demonstrations at artist booths and the Potters Guild display,
- Artful Kid Zone free art activities for the family each day on Church St. north of South University, from 10 AM until 4 PM daily;
- Selected family entertainment at the Artful Kid Zone all day;
- Featuring Arts for All adaptive art equipment for wheelchair users at the Artful Kid Zone each evening;
- Souvenirs like T-shirts and Canvas Bags featuring the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair 2001 artwork by Mamie Joe, and new items embroidered with the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair logo.

Dedicated to the visual arts through connecting the finest artists from across the country with a knowledgeable and appreciative audience, the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair also sponsors exhibits, awards scholarships to visual art students at area schools, places art in public buildings, and provides major support for the South University Area Association.

A broad base of community support from individuals, local businesses and organizations, city government, educational institutions, and other area non-profits is essential to our success. The 42nd annual Ann Arbor Street Art Fair recognizes and thanks these individuals and groups for their support: the artists, the jurors, the many wonderful and knowledgeable individuals who volunteer their time during the fair to assist the artists and the audience, and...

Ann Arbor Street Art Fair

Since 1960, the original Ann Arbor art fair has evolved into one of the nation's premier fine arts events. Begun with fewer than 100 local artists, it now draws approximately 1,800 applications each year for its 199 exhibit spaces. Specialized artist juries assure an astonishingly high level of quality, attracting serious collectors and representatives from major art galleries around the country. (An additional fifteen exhibitors from the Ann Arbor Potters Guild are selected through a separate jurying process.)

The Place: The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair takes place on South University Avenue from Washtenaw to Tappan, and on East University Avenue between Willard and the University of Michigan campus. (The booths on Church Street between South U and Willard are a separate fair, the South University merchants' Art Fair Village; see below.)

Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, Inc.: This nonprofit organization is governed by a seventeen-member board of directors that includes South University businesspeople and Ann Arbor artists and townspeople. For information about exhibitors or about the 2002 fair, July 17–20, write to Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, P.O. Box 1352, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106, or call (734) 994–5260. (Applications are due in early February 2002.) Website: www.artfair.org

Prizes: On the first day of the fair, Wednesday, July 18, two jurors will select ten exhibits of exceptionally high quality and originality to receive $300 cash awards and a travel voucher courtesy of United Airlines. Look for the ribbons in the artists' booths on Thursday.

Artist Demonstrations: More than fifteen artists, along with members of the Potters Guild, will be demonstrating their craft at their booths. See the Artist Showcases box on p. 23, or check the list of schedules and locations posted near the information booth on the corner of South University and East University and on signs throughout the fair.

Art Activities: Young and old can try their hands at artistic expression at the Artful Kid Zone on Church north of South University from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day. Sponsored by Farmer Jack and staffed by teachers from the Michigan Art Education Association, the booth features free art activities designed for the whole family. From

The project is sponsored by the Washtenaw Intermediate School District; Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, Inc.; and Very Special Arts, a nationwide organization that gives people with disabilities the opportunity to create art and educates the community about disabilities through art.

Information Booths: Can't find your favorite Ann Arbor Street Art Fair artist? Ask the volunteers at the fair's information booths at South University and East University or at South University and Tappan.

Merchandise Booth: Posters, T-shirts, tote bags, and hats are on sale at the merchandise booth on the corner of East University and South University, opposite the information booth.

Emergency First Aid: A tent near the corner of South University and Tappan is set up for emergency first aid, including water and ice packs for heat stress.

Ann Arbor CB & Emergency Radio Team: Volunteers from the Ann Arbor CB & Emergency Radio Team patrol the fair, helping to find lost children and relaying information to fair organizers on everything from crowd problems to weather. The team's headquarters are just north of the intersection of South University and East University.

year at the fair for boogie-woogie pianist Mark "Mr. B" Braun; he will be at his usual spot on the corner of South University and East University. A variety of artists perform on stages at each end of the fair. At the Artful Kid Zone, there will be special family-oriented performances each day of the fair (Wed.-Fri. 10 a.m.-9 p.m., Sat. 10 a.m.-6 p.m.). For details, see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 69.

Live Broadcasts: WKQI (95.5 FM), the fair's official FM radio sponsor, broadcasts live from Church Street near the Artful Kid Zone starting at 3 p.m. Wed.-Fri. and at 11 a.m. on Sat. WQKL (107.1 FM) broadcasts live from the corner of East University and South University each day of the fair.

Food and Beverages: Dasani, an official fair sponsor, sells water from a booth on South University at Tappan. There are numerous food and beverage merchants in the fair area. See Food at the Fair, p. 77.

South University Area Association: This non-profit organization of businesspeople promotes the South University shopping district. After a rift with the Street Art Fair (see Inside the Fair, p. 7), the association has developed its own fair, the Art Fair Village (see below).

The Art Fair Village, on Church between South University and Willard, is a new juried art fair founded last year by the South University Area Association. This year the fair will feature the work of about fifty artists exhibiting in all major media. The Art Fair Village also includes food sales and a stage which will feature performances by about twenty blues and jazz musicians, broadcast live over WEMU 89.1 FM (for a full listing, see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 69). For more information on the Art Fair Village, including the 2002 fair, July 17-20, write to the South University Area Association at P.O. Box 4525, Ann Arbor, MI 48106-4525, or call (734) 663-5300.

ANN ARBOR SUMMER ART FAIR™

Presented by The Michigan Guild of Artists & Artisans
31ST ANNUAL CELEBRATION OF ART

The Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair, organized by The Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans, is proud to celebrate 31 years of presenting the nation's best in fine arts to the Ann Arbor community. With more than 1,100 members who donate their time and energies to the promotion of visual arts in the U.S., The Guild has selected over 470 artists from 37 states to show their work at this award-winning event. Drawing from such a talented pool, the Summer Art Fair represents the largest and most diverse range of art shown at the Ann Arbor Art Fairs. In addition to the spectacular array of artwork on display, the Summer Art Fair also encourages its guests to enjoy the lively, family-oriented entertainment and festivities that take place around the Fair. The Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair and The Michigan Guild would like to recognize the City of Ann Arbor and the Main Street Area Association for their help and support. We would also like to extend a special thanks to all the community volunteers who have given their time and efforts toward making this such an outstanding event, year after year.

Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair

With more than 460 exhibitors, the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair is the largest of the Art Fairs. It includes a wide selection of fine art and crafts, everything from painting and glass to fiber arts and clay, at an equally wide range of prices. The exhibitor roster remains relatively stable from year to year, and many loyal customers return each summer to seek out their favorite artists.

The Place: The Summer Art Fair is the only fair with two separate locations: the campus section (booths C1-C244) is on State Street from South University to William; the downtown section (booths D245-D464) is on Main Street from William to Huron, and on Liberty Street from Main to Fifth Avenue.

Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans: This nonprofit organization was created in 1971 to manage the free art fair that had sprung up the year before on the University of Michigan Diag. The guild now boasts 1,100 members, making the Summer Art Fair the only Ann Arbor fair sponsored by the artists themselves. Booths are open to guild members only, and exhibition privileges are so coveted that members may spend eight years on the waiting list before being offered a space. Artists are juried by a panel of five guild members and five outside jurors. For information about exhibitors, membership, or the 2002 fair, July 17-20, write to the guild at 118 North Fourth Avenue, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48104, or call (734) 662-3382. Website: www.michiganguild.org E-mail: guild@michiganguild.org

Artist Showcase: Michigan Guild artists will be demonstrating their work on East Liberty between Main Street and Fourth Avenue (see p. 35 for schedule).

Imagination Station: This booth in front of the post office at East Liberty and Fifth features free art activities designed for children, though fairgoers of all ages are welcome to try their hands. Wed.-Fri. 11 a.m.-6 p.m., Sat. 11 a.m.-4 p.m.

Summer Art Fair Print Tent: This booth at the corner of Main and Liberty sells affordable lithograph reproductions of original artwork by Michigan Guild artists.

Merchandise Booths: You can buy 2001 Summer Art Fair T-shirts, posters, and canvas bags at either of two booths: at State Street and South University (campus section) or at Main and Liberty (downtown section).

BIG AND BOUNTIFUL

Information Booths: Guild booths on State in front of the University of Michigan Museum of Art (campus section) and on Main and Liberty (downtown section) offer friendly assistance of all kinds.

Live Music and Entertainment: There is a performance area at Liberty and Main. For details and performance schedules, see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 69.

Main Street Area Association: The association sells T-shirts and souvenirs and provides information about downtown Ann Arbor at its booth at Liberty and Main.

Main Street Area Association Food Court: Local restaurants and visiting vendors sell food and drinks at this food court on West Liberty between Main and Ashley beginning at 10 a.m. each day of the fair. Seating available. See Food at the Fair, p. 77.

Michigan Union: Tired fairgoers can relax in cool, comfortable rest areas and refuel in the basement food court. Wed. & Thurs. 7 a.m.-midnight, Fri. & Sat. 7 a.m.-2 a.m.

Michigan Union Food Court: When's the last time you had a root beer float, souvlaki, or an ice-cold strawberry daiquiri? You'll find colorful tents and exotic aromas in the usual spot between the Michigan Union and the Literature, Science, and the Arts Building. The court opens at 10:30 a.m. each day of the fairs. See Food at the Fair, p. 77.

Inside the museum, visitors can see works in all media and from all parts of the world, including paintings by Picasso, Monet, and Whistler. Each day of the fair there will also be live music and activities for young people on the porch from 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 69.

State Street Area Art Fair

This fair was organized in 1968 by a group of merchants and other businesspeople on the northwest edges of the U-M campus. They saw the four-day explosion of business on South University during the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, and they wanted to find a way to lure those same thousands of hungry, thirsty, sophisticated, and curious visitors past their storefronts as well.

The State Street Area Art Fair (SSAAF) has since made a niche of its own. Aggressively juried throughout most of its thirty-four years, it vies for many of the same top artists as the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair; an artist who appeared in one fair last year is likely to show up this year in the other. This year's fair has 300 exhibitors, of whom well over a third are new this year. (An additional twenty-six artists exhibit their work at the Ann Arbor Fiber Arts Guild booth through a separate jurying process.)

The Place: "Area" is the key word in this fair's name. The artists are near State Street on Maynard, East Liberty, Thompson, William, and North University. The big line of booths on State Street south of William is actually the campus section of the Summer Art Fair.

State Street Area Association: This nonprofit organization of merchants and other businesspeople sponsors the State Street Area Art Fair and promotes the State Street shopping district. For information on the 2002 fair, July 17–20, or for artists' addresses and phone numbers, write to the State Street Area Art Fair, P.O. Box 7469, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48107, or call (734) 663-6511. Website: www.a2state.com

Prizes and Purchase Awards: This fair awards two $700 best-of-show cash awards (one for two-dimensional works and one for three-dimensional) and eight $175 honorable-mention prizes. The winners' names will be posted at the main information booth on State Street at East Liberty on Thursday.

State Street Area Art Fair Print Tent: This booth on State at William sells affordable lithograph reproductions of original artwork by SSAAF artists. A complete list of participating artists is available at the fair's information booths (see below).

Information Booths: Volunteers answer questions and sell T-shirts, posters, and postcards. There are three booths, at State and East Liberty, at State and William, and at Liberty and Division.

Electronic Postcards: Fairgoers can pose in wild and wacky Art Fair scenes and send the picture as an electronic postcard to anyone with Internet access. Postcards are sent from a booth in front of the offices of Michigan Live, at the corner of East Liberty and Division streets (across from Liberty Plaza).

First Aid Station: Staffed by paramedics from the Ann Arbor Fire Department, the first aid station is at Liberty and Division. The department will also have three tactical units patrolling the fair area to answer questions about first aid and safety.

Children's Activities: This year for the first time the State Street Area Art Fair will be hosting a children's activity area: the massive A-Squared Kids' Mural, presented by Farmer Jack and Edy's, is a six-by-seventeen-foot project on Liberty Street in front of Liberty Plaza (at South Division). Northville artist Jeff Von Buskirk will design the mural, a kid's map of Ann Arbor highlighting important landmarks. Aspiring artists of all ages are invited to paint a section of the mural for free anytime during the Art Fairs.

Live Music and Entertainment: There are two performance locations: Liberty Plaza, on the corner of East Liberty and South Division, sponsored by Herb David Guitar Studio, and State Street near East Washington, coordinated by Steve Bergman of Michigan Theater: This ornate restored movie house on East Liberty operates a "beer garden" featuring cold beer, bratwurst, snacks, and air-conditioning for weary fairgoers Wed.-Sat. 11 a.m.-9 p.m. The theater sells movie posters, T-shirts, and other film memorabilia at a booth outside the theater, and presents art and foreign films in the evenings (see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 69).

Live Broadcasts: WQKL (107.1 FM) broadcasts live throughout the fair.

Herb David Guitar Studio: This studio-and-store on East Liberty at Fifth Avenue presents its popular porch performances again this year at various times throughout the fair.

Nonprofit Organization Booths: Representatives from about seventy local organizations are at booths on East Liberty between Fifth Avenue and Division, passing out literature and talking on everything from AIDS research to the exploration of Mars.

UNIQUELY AMERICAN.

Stickley

Inspired by the Arts & Crafts movement.
Gustav Stickley put aside the excesses of decoration and made furniture that was simple, strong and handsome. He was unique in his time, a rebel, but with the Mission Oak Collection, he built something that would endure.

Now special values offered during our Summer Sale.

ANN ARBOR'S THIRD COHOUSING COMMUNITY IS NOW FORMING!

HoneyCreek COHOUSING

Want to live where you know all your neighbors?

Cohousing is a form of collaborative housing that offers residents an old-fashioned sense of neighborhood. In cohousing, residents know their neighbors very well, and there is a strong sense of community that is absent in contemporary cities and suburbs.

Cohousing communities consist of private, fully-equipped condominiums and extensive common amenities including a community building (or "common house") and recreation areas. They are designed and managed by the residents who have chosen to live in a close-knit neighborhood that seeks a healthy blend of privacy and community.

Cohousers are simply creating consciously the community that used to occur naturally.

—Hans S. Anderson, Cohousing Organizer

Imagine...

- A community with individually-owned, complete condominiums with 1, 2, 3, and 4 bedrooms
- A rural feel, fewer than ten minutes from downtown Ann Arbor, in the Ann Arbor School District
- A diverse, intergenerational, friendly atmosphere that is safe for children and conducive to visiting with neighbors
- A large community building, called a common house, for optional shared meals and many other activities
- A pedestrian village that is clustered around walkways and the common house, with cars parked on the periphery of the site
- Ecologically-sensitive construction with buildings clustered to preserve green space

We are ready to build on a beautiful site with ponds and vistas, and we are seeking a diverse group of residents.

For more details about this newly forming community, come to an informational meeting in Ann Arbor:

"My father was a car designer and I think my Passat has the kind of styling he'd approve. Not only does it look good, it's fun to drive."

Buying the car was a pleasant experience. The Howard Cooper salesperson was very helpful and professional.

The one time I had my car in for maintenance it's easy to see why all those customers rave about how friendly and courteous the service people are."

So What If I am ADD. Some people do not care why I can't read or spell. How are they supposed to know about my disorder? To be sure, I am smart, I do not wish to be this way. Find me someone who does, I would gladly trade. A book is a terrible maze to me; my mind seems to go to waste. Although I try, I do not succeed despite the time I spend dedicated to the task of trying to comprehend.

The art of eating Something for everyone

How many art galleries do you know where a child can walk around with a dripping ice cream cone? Where adults can enjoy everything from pizza and cherry slurpy to blackened salmon at the same time they admire artwork made of everything from bronze to batik?

Well, in mid-July in Ann Arbor one can feast one's eyes on eats and art, and there is sumptuous fare for everyone. During the Ann Arbor Art Fairs, local restaurants go all out to provide your awakened senses and frenzied taste buds with every sweet, sour, spicy, and savory dish you desire.

The following restaurants and temporary food courts are all within four blocks of the fairs. Restaurants are arranged in alphabetical order by neighborhood, with each restaurant's name followed by coordinates referring to its location on the map on pp. 78-79. For instance, D2 in the listing for Argiero's means that Argiero's can be found at the intersection of column D and row 2.

Prices for a meal for one, excluding beverage, tax, and tip:

$ (under $6)	$$$ ($12-$20)
$$ ($6-$12)	$$$$ (over $20)

Ⓐ = Alcohol is served
